

An evening to remember

The Winning House, Flora, with the trophy and the judges

The IGCSE & IBDP students of NSS Hill Spring International School celebrated their annual programme, 'Expressions' last week at The Nehru Auditorium. The evening was filled with extravagant performances. Right from conceptualising of the events to their execution, the students were involved in each step towards making this evening what it was. All three houses (Aqua, Terra and Flora) created a magnificent interpretation of this year's theme, 'Environmental Sustainability'. The winning house, Flora, took a light-hearted and witty approach on the sensitive topic of carbon footprints and called it, 'Have you any carbon sense?' and won hearts. 'Happily ever after' and 'Two boxes of paint' were the other two musical extravaganzas that kept the audience immersed in the performances. The judges, Siddharth Malhotra (Producer & Director) and Rajan Waghchare (TV director) had a tough time in zeroing down on the winners.

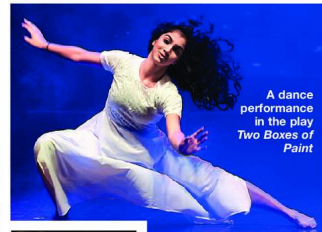

NSS Hill Spring International School has continued encouraging every form of art and music with their holistic approach. This was evident with the in-house bands' — 45 and Evolution — performance, who played some fine music while the audience sang in chorus. Another feather in the musical cap was the engaging performance by a Class 12 student, who mesmerised everyone with her magical voice as she sang Rolling in the Deep. 'It gives us immense pleasure to see such carefully curated events executed by our students,' shared Dr Jaydeep Mirashi, Chairman. After hearing an encore from the audience, Nalini Pinto, the school's Principal, commented, 'The students have turned out with some spectacular ways of storytelling with our theme of Environmental Sustainability.' One could sense the anticipation for the next one already when Dr Pratibha Mirashi, Managing Director of the school, said, 'All in all, it was quite an expression-filled evening, by the students, for the students and we cannot wait to see what they have in store for next year.'
